

Spring 2017

16:988:603 Feminist Knowledge Production

T 12:35-3:35

RDJC-011 C/D

Professor Jasbir Puar

In this seminar we will trace a number of debates, dialogues and interventions pivotal to the production of feminist theory over the last several decades. In highlighting the pragmatics and materiality of the production aspect of feminist knowledge, we will look very specifically at how feminist knowledge is dialectically created. We will focus on intertextual exchange, citation practices, convergences and departures from disciplinary and field norms and expectations, and the repurposing of canonical work, some of it feminist, for critical race feminist interventions, postcolonial feminist theory, and transnational feminist analysis.