What are the methods researchers and activists use to create new knowledge? Run as a workshop, this course enables students to produce new knowledge. We read in the fields of women’s and gender studies, critical race, sexuality studies, and social justice, and unpack how the authors did their work. Students design their own research projects.