RESEARCH INTERESTS

Broadly defined, my research and teaching concentrate on women's agency, political activism, grassroots mobilization and the construction of women's political spaces. Over the last fifteen years I have worked with many women's and feminist groups in central and east Europe, Caucasus, and Central Asia on questions of political participation and women's rights. I have also conducted extensive work on the impacts of political and economic restructuring on the process of democratization, forced migration, citizens' participation and decentralization in central and east Europe, and Caucasus. I am the director of the Local Democracy Partnership Program (LDP). Several international/comparative research projects in the areas of gender studies, participatory politics, Third Sector, and public administration have been conducted by LDP. This work has been sponsored by major foundations and governmental agencies and attracted over $ 9 million in funding. Several projects that specifically focus on women's political subjecthood have been or are currently conducted in Belarus, Ukraine, Poland, Armenia, Kyrgyzstan, as well as Georgia.
